Access Capital Partners
announces a senior promotion within its Infrastructure Team

European Private Assets group Access Capital Partners (“Access”) is delighted to announce the promotion of Tomas Wegelius as Infrastructure Partner.

Tomas Wegelius joined Access in January 2013, after six years with Société Générale CIB where he was part of the Principal Investments team in London, focusing on infrastructure equity investments.

Tomas has 11 years of experience in infrastructure investing and 2 years in investment banking. He holds a master’s degree in physics from Imperial College London and a master’s degree in politics from the London School of Economics. Tomas is a Finnish national.

Access Capital Partners manages €1.14bn in infrastructure through co-mingled funds and separate mandates for institutional investors.

The investment strategy is to generate a combination of recurrent yield with long-term capital appreciation through fund investments and direct and co-investments in brownfield infrastructure assets, predominantly in Europe. Access invests across various sectors including energy, transportation, communications and social infrastructure targeting assets with high visibility on revenues and yield granted by long term contractual agreements or regulated tariffs with inflation protection through revenues indexation.

Access’ dedicated infrastructure team comprises 7 investment professionals with an international profile. They have developed a high degree of expertise and a strong track record since 2008.
